Lochmere Populace Meeting Notes

No Meeting for the month of August, 2018 due to Pennsic

With the new Mary Queen of Scots movie starring Saoirse Ronan coming in December I wanted to share a part of Mary's life you are probably unaware of, her poetry.

This poem was sent to Elizabeth I with a diamond ring as a token of friendship in 1562.

The original poem in French is lost but there are two Latin translations that this English version is based upon.

The Diamond Speaks

'Tis not because my strength outranks both flame and brand.

Nor because my facets display a cunning hand,

Nor because, set in fine-wrought gold, I shine so bright,

Nor even that I'm pure, whiter than Phoebus' light.

But rather because my form is a heart, like unto

My Mistress' heart (but for hardness), that I'm sent to you.

For all things must yield to unfettered purity

And she is my true equal in each quality.

For who would fail to grant that once I had been sent,

My Mistress should thus, in turn, find favour and content?

May it please, from these omens I shall gather strength

And thus from Queen to equal Queen I'll pass at length.

O would I could join the with an iron band alone

(though all prefer gold) and unite their hearts as one

That neither envy, greed nor gossip's evil play,

Nor mistrust, nor ravaging time could wear away

Then they'd say among treasures I was most renowned,

For I'd have two great jewels in one setting bound.

Then with my glitt'ring rays I should confound the sight

Of all who saw me, dazzling enemies with my light.

The, by my worth and by her art, I should be known

As the diamond, the greatest jewel, the mighty stone.

Bittersweet within my heart translated and edited by Robin Bell published in 1992 by Chronicle Books is a compilation of her love poems. ISBN 0811802361. Please seek out a copy of Mr. Bell's poems for further study and enjoyment. It is available through Amazon and Abebooks.com.

B&B Corner

Greetings Lochmere!

Sarra and I returned from war with an uplifted spirit - glad to see all of our populace doing all they do and having fun. She and I were able to fight - and were very proud of our son Gabriel for getting on the field to be on a siege crew. The family that fights together....

As we turn to the rest of the year we look to the Barony's premiere melee event - Battle on the Bay. We are especially excited about this being our 30th anniversary of being the Barony of Lochmere. Looking forward to seeing all of you there!

Sarra and I would like to say that our first year of being Baron and Baroness has been very fulfilling and rewarding. We thank you all for your continued support of us. We really appreciate your service to the Barony and dream.

Thanks again for all you do!

Cormac and Sarra

Baron and Baroness, Lochmere

Battle on the Bay

September 21-23, 2018—Patuxent River Park (aka Croom Park)
16000 Croom Airport Road Upper Marlboro, Maryland

Summer comes to an end and the warriors of Storvik and Lochmere return home with tales of glorious battle and honor. The Baronies of Lochmere and Storvik, however, continue to thirst for wordframe and glory and invite all to join us for a great melee event. This year also marks the Barony of Lochmere's 30th Birthday and we hope to see many friendly faces to swell our numbers in celebration.
