Officer Spotlight—Marshal

The Marshal is in charge of marital activities. There are as many branches of the Marshallate as there are different activities that involve weapons and safety officers. In our honor based Society, this is someone whose job is to make sure our armor and weapons comply with our safety regulations, that the participants comply with the Rules of the Lists (our regulations governing martial activities), and if asked, provide an unbiased fair witness. It varies how this fair witness is handled in different kingdoms, so be aware when you go to inter-kingdom events or move to a different land. Marshals are the Crown's eyes on the field at a tournament or war. Always remember, it does come down to personal honor. When a warrior is scrupulously honest, using the ideals of chivalry to be fair and just and a good sport, their fellow fighters will admire them as honorable, and worthy of respect. If a warrior behaves dishonorably and pretends a blow was light or off the tip of a sword too many times, and their fellow fighters disagree, they earn a very different reputation.

Our Archery Marshal is Dame Dealla Cohen and she can be reached at deallac@juno.com.

Our Knight Marshal is Lord Linhart Von Marburg and he can be reached at knightmarshal@lochmere.atlantia.sca.org.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Flavored Ice

After Catherine de' Medici introduced ice cream to France in mid-16th century, ice creams started their incredible rise. Production capabilities changed with century to century, new recipes and fashions were formed, refrigeration techniques and automated machines were introduced, and ice creams traveled to all four corners of the world. United States received their first ice cream in mid-17th century, few decades later it was sold in public, and in 1851 it was made by large commercial enterprises. <sup>2</sup>

1533: a Florentine chef makes a different flavored ice for each day of Catherine de Medici's wedding celebration, giving many Frenchmen their first taste of the dessert. By 1576, there will be 250 master ice makers in Paris.. <sup>1</sup>

Bernardo Buontalenti (Florence, 1531-Florence 1608) was a Florentine stage designer, architect, theatrical designer, military engineer and artist. He was much employed in the design of fortifications, villas, and gardens and is considered one of the most important architects of the Mannerist period (the Medici Villa in Pratolino, the Tribune in the Uffizzi Gallery, the palace of Bianca cappello in Via Maggio, the Forte Belvedere, the Buontalenti Cave in the Boboli Garden, the project for the new city of Livorno, etc.). He was also a great mechanic, and an excellent mathematician. Besides that, he is also traditionally considered the inventor of modern gelato. The Grand Duke Cosimo I de' Medici wanted him to organize an opulent banquet to celebrate the Spanish deputation, that had to stand open-mouthed in front of so much splendour. Buontalenti invented a new dessert for the occasion: a sorbet made with ice, salt (to lower the temperature), lemon, sugar, egg, honey, milk and a drop of wine. His cold cream was flavoured with bergamot and orange and was the forerunner of the modern Florentine cream. Buontalenti was an expert of the ice conservation; he has indeed projected some cold storage room both in the Boboli Garden and in the Cascine area. Near the Medici Fortress there is a street called Via delle Ghiacciaie (i.g. "icehouse street"), that owes its name to the cellars covered with isolating cork and wood panels, with a system of canes that let the thawed ice flow down. Buontalenti probably even built a sort of manual whisk to whip up the cream. <sup>3</sup>

"The preface of the "Kokin Waka Shū" relates how waka came into being at the time of the beginning of heaven and earth, and that they became widespread during the Nara period. Indeed, the collection of poems known as the "Man'yōshū" was compiled during the Nara period, and waka played a central role in the culture of the time. At that time, efforts were being taken to absorb Chinese culture and China's political and legal systems in an attempt to create a state in the Japanese archipelago modeled on ancient Chinese states. As part of this, the writing of Chinese poems became popular in the aristocratic world, resulting in the compilation of the Kaifuso and other collections of Chinese poetry. The enthusiastic absorption of Chinese culture in this way continued up to the beginning of the Heian period, that is, the second half of the 9th century, so that on the cultural side the zenith of Chinese poetry continued. During this time, waka continued to lead a somewhat furtive existence as part of everyday life."
