Officer Spotlight – Webminister

These are the amazing people who make our websites interesting and make sure our links are current and working. They work amazing hours and are responsible for the first impression many people have of our Society and each branch. The internet has a huge presence in our SCA lives, for doing and sharing our research, communicating with each other about what's going on, and what cool new thing someone has found.

When our websites provide good information that is well presented, they are consulted by people from across the Known World, and even by historical organizations outside the SCA, which is a huge compliment to us—and to our webministers.

Our Webminister is Lady Marta De Lyon and she can be contacted at webminister@lochmere.atlantia.sca.org.

Harvesting bitter oranges. Figure from folio 18v of the manuscript Nouvelle Acquisition Latine 1673, a 14th-century (approximately 1390-1400) copy of the Tacuinum Sanitatis. Bibliothèque nationale de France, held in the Mandragore database of illuminated manuscripts.

1332: the trade of bitter oranges begins in Nice. To this point no other kind of Orange (a word derived from Hindi) is known in Europe, although Seville oranges were introduced by Arabs into the Mediterranean region during the 9th or 10th century.¹

How to bake Orenge²

Faire peelee your Orenge, and pick away all the white that is under the peelee, and so lay them in fine paste, and put into them Sugar, very little Sinamon or none at all, but a little Ginger and bake them very leisurely.

To make Conserve of Orenge²

Take Orenge and pare them very thin the red of the out sides away and quarter them in four, and take away the white of the inside, then seeth them in faire water softlye for breaking, ofte change them in warm water til they be lost: as the yelowne dooth seeth away, so weareth away the bitterne, then take them out of the water and lay them in a fair vessell that the water may run away from them, then beate them small with a spoone, and put to every pound of Orenge one pound of sugar, and half a pound of Rosewater, and boile them together and box them.

To preserve Orenge²

Take your Pilles and water them two nights and one day and dry them clean againe, and boyle them with a soft fire the space of one hower, then take them out to coole, and make your sirrop half with rosewater and half with that liquor & put double sugar to your Orenge, and when your sirup is halfe sodden, then let your Orenge seethe one quarter of an houre more, then take out your Orenge & let the sirup seeth untill it rope, and when all is colde, then put your Orenge into the sirrop: the white of an Egge and Sugar beaten together, will make it to candie.

Chatelain:

- ◆ He has stepped down due to mundane life
- ◆ The Deputy Lady Alyce de Glaize has volunteered to step up

Herald: (emailed report)

- ◆ July and August have been fairly busy with the Herald's office. July was spent communicating with Andrew a bit about name possibilities, and working with the society Laurel and Wreath Heralds on badges for the different disciplines for the Society Marshal. We've made advances on that so that the martial disciplines might have official badges soon, and the Society Marshal doesn't have to speak herald to get it done.
- ◆ August was all about Pennsic. A delegation from Lochmere assembled for Opening Ceremonies and the grand procession on Saturday evening. Alas Their Majesties' herald for Opening Ceremonies got the day wrong and wasn't on site yet and They needed an organized loud mouth replacement, and asked for my services. So I apologized to Their Excellencies Lochmere, tossed the herald's tabard at the group, and went to go find out the plan. I believe Lord Marcus Galmsson bore the tabard as Armored Champion. I scurried to ask the other Kingdom Heralds what the plan was, made sure the baronies were in order, and gave directions to Gardiner's Company in the lead. In the end I took the opportunity to introduce the baronies and shires to the already assembled Crowns from the kingdoms created before Atlantia.
- ◆ Sunday night Their Excellencies Cormac and Sarra, Baron and Baroness of Lochmere held a brief court. As part of greetings many cheers were raised for Lord Amleth and his already proven superiority on the Archery and Thrown Weapons ranges. Then Their Excellencies called forth Mistress Arianna Morgan and spoke of her excellent service rendered to the Barony and acknowledged her works with the Award of Excellence of Lochmere. For Their last item of business Their Excellencies extolled the virtue of courtesy and specifically the unflinching courtesy shown to all by Lady Anne d'Evreux by bestowing on her the Award of Courtesy of Lochmere. Thus concluding the Pennsic court of Baron Cormac and Baroness Sarra, those present were invited to enjoy the sweets provided by our friends in the Barony of Bright Hills and their Vicar Baroness Rebecca.
- ◆ Wednesday brought Atlantian court and a Great Court for all the landed Baronage. There was a slight delay as Their Majesties Herald, a different herald from Opening Ceremonies, became suddenly ill and a replacement had to be fetched. Thankfully I just helped get everyone in order for procession, found a herald and preferred titles and honorifics for the Khan and Khatun of the Great Dark Horde, and got an awesome seat behind Their Excellencies with Lochmere's champions Marcus, Melchior, and Amleth for an amazing Atlantian court.
- ◆ As we prepare for Battle on the Bay in a couple of weeks, get in those award

Bards of Olde Presented by Duchess Simone de Barjavel

Dante Alighieri 1265-1321

Dante is regarded as one of the finest Italian poets and is considered a major influence in Western culture. He is most famous for his epic poem Commedia (The Divine Comedy). Dante was born in Florence in 1265 and during his teens had an apprenticeship with Brunetto Latino, a celebrated poet of the time. Dante inherited a small fortune in 1283 and enrolled at the university of Bologna at age 21 but left school within two years to join the Florentine army and participate in the Battle of Campaldino. In 1290 His romantic ideal, Beatrice Portinari died, inspiring him to write lyrical poems like Vita Nuova. He also became involved in Florentine politics, which eventually led to his life-time banishment from the city. Dante is buried in Ravenna where he spent many years of his exile.

Sestina of the Lady Pietra degli Scrovigni

by Dante Alighieri Translated by Dante Gabriel Rossetti

To the dim light and the large circle of shade
I have clomb, and to the whitening of the hills,
There where we see no color in the grass.
Natheless my longing loses not its green,
It has so taken root in the hard stone
Which talks and hears as though it were a lady.

Utterly frozen is this youthful lady,
Even as the snow that lies within the shade;
For she is no more moved than is the stone
By the sweet season which makes warm the hills
And alters them afresh from white to green
Covering their sides again with flowers and grass.

When on her hair she sets a crown of grass
The thought has no more room for other lady,
Because she weaves the yellow with the green
So well that Love sits down there in the shade,—
Love who has shut me in among low hills
Faster than between walls of granite-stone.

She is more bright than is a precious stone;
The wound she gives may not be healed with grass:
I therefore have fled far o'er plains and hills
For refuge from so dangerous a lady;
But from her sunshine nothing can give shade,—
Not any hill, nor wall, nor summer-green.

A while ago, I saw her dressed in green,—
So fair, she might have wakened in a stone
This love which I do feel even for her shade;
And therefore, as one woos a graceful lady,
I wooed her in a field that was all grass
Girdled about with very lofty hills.

Yet shall the streams turn back and climb the hills
Before Love's flame in this damp wood and green
Burn, as it burns within a youthful lady,
For my sake, who would sleep away in stone
My life, or feed like beasts upon the grass,
Only to see her garments cast a shade.

How dark soe'er the hills throw out their shade,
Under her summer green the beautiful lady
Covers it, like a stone cover'd in grass.
